

How to Access the WJZF Site

Contributed by Administrator
Sunday, 02 November 2008

Ok, so you've been listening to WJZF either via the FM airwaves or via the live streaming over the Internet, and now you want to comment on what a great show, or perhaps post a comment relevant to the political or sports leanings of our hosts, or maybe just a quick note with ideas for new shows. How do you do that? Well, we have the Forums section here on WJZF.org just for that purpose!

To access the forums, all you need is a user account, which you can easily get (it's FREE!) by clicking the Register text below the Logon section on the lower left. Fill out the requested info using an active email account (you'll need an email account to confirm you wanted to registered on the site), and within a day or two after you confirm your request, we'll set your account up. Then, you simply log into the site and access the Forums and other areas, and post your comments and criticisms and suggestions! The good thing is, our show authors and staffers also have direct access to the forums, so you're talking directly to them!

For WJZF staffers, if you haven't got your account yet, sign up and notify me, Gordon Cunningham, that you've set up your account, and we'll get you proper staff access to the site. There is a private Staff Only forum for WJZF volunteers, and of course ways to post other info about yourself, your show, and the station in general.

We also have WJZF.org email addresses for volunteers and staff, which we can set up for anyone on staff, and are accessible via either a web site or your own email program like Outlook Express, etc. Just ask!

One more neat feature is real-time Chat. We've added it in test format at present, but it seems to be working just fine. Plan a meeting time to chat up your favorite WJZF friends and hosts - it's all freely available 24x7!

Hope to see you online at WJZF.org soon!